Live-Scan Fingerprinting

The Market

Fingerprinting is a rapidly growing requirement for regulated professions, such as financial services and healthcare. Most professional positions require a live scan background check. Federal and state governments are also continually adding fingerprinting to employment and licensing requirements.

The Service

A Live Scan Background Check includes information about a person's criminal history and other records pertinent to the position of the applicant. In checking one's criminal history, state and federal databases will be searched, in addition to sex and violent offender databases. This background check also requires individuals to have their fingerprints and sometimes even a specialized photo for facial recognition taken, and submitted along with the original request for the report. This biometric data is utilized in the request to search for profession-specific offenses outlined by local, state, and federal authorities which might forbid an applicant from performing his or her duties in that position.

Business Background Checks

The Market

Increasingly, businesses are conducting personal or employment background checks on prospective employees. It is important for businesses to know who they are hiring, which is why it is no mystery as to why the market for this service has been steadily growing every year.

The Service

Customers will fill out a background check release form and application to begin the process. Your job as a partner is finished at that point, our licensed criminal investigative team will then conduct the background check and verify results.

Tenant Screening

The Market

According to recent research, landlords are becoming more and more cautious in terms of accepting tenants. Many communities are also beginning to enforce community guidelines that require tenants to be screened before being accepted into a community.

The Service

Customers will fill out a form with required information about prospective tenants. The required information will then be submitted to process a criminal background check, credit check, and reference check using an online form found on our website. The web form will transmit the information securely (using SSL encryption) to our database server for processing.
